Authorities inform Baytown Texas residents Penny Romero and her son Austin Wilson they have 15 minutes to evacutate on Aug. 29 in the wake of Hurricane Harvey.

Simple survival

❑ Former Nara Visan forced out of her Texas home in Harvey wake.

After years of living in eastern New Mexico's climate, former Nara Visa resident could not believe the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey, which forced her family to evacuate their home.

"I told my fiancé, I'm from New Mexico, I've never seen this much water at one time," said Dessaray Padilla, now of Baytown, Texas.

Padilla, who moved from Nara Visa in 1998, said she is currently living in Baytown with her fiancee, Austin Wilson. She said the couple has been staying at the home of Wilson's parents.

Baytown is 42 miles east of Houston. Padilla and Wilson had just returned to Baytown from New Mexico two days before Hurricane Harvey hit.

Padilla said they were able to ride out Harvey, which made land on Sunday and brought 51.88 inches of water to the area. She said it initially appeared the family would be able to stay in their home.

There was a reported total of 45.1 inches of rainfall from Hurricane Harvey from Aug. 26 - Aug. 28 said Don Oettinger, National Weather Service Houston/Galveston Texas.

Oettinger said there have been reports of rainfall totals as high as 50 inches, but nothing has been confirmed.

"There is a bayou located near the home that acts as a drainage system for the flood waters," Padilla said.

Wilson said in the 22 years that his parents have lived at that home the bayou has always prevented the water from flooding the area.

However, on Aug. 29, Padilla, Wilson and his parents were told they were going to have to evacuate the home.

Former Nara Visa resident Dessaray Padilla takes a photo of the flooded street near her residence in Baytown, Texas.

"On Monday (Aug. 28), I went to bed and the water was across the street," Wilson said. "When I woke up it was at our door step."

Wilson said to ease the flooding in Houston, authorities were going to have to release water from nearby dams. He said the inflow of this released water would be to great for the bayou to handle and the water was expected to rise another 8 feet.

"Authorities came on a boat and told us we had 15 minutes to grab the essentials and evacuate," Padilla said.

Padilla said at this point the only way to evacuate the area was by boat or air. She said much of the neighborhood was several feet

Slaying suspect arrested

❑ Landlord-tenant argument alleged root of shooting.

By Thomas Garcia

A Tucumcari man has been arrested and charged with murder following a homicide investigation Tuesday by New Mexico State Police in Tucumcari.

Christopher Bamberg, 46, is charged with one count of murder following his arrest in connection to a fatal shooting of Justin Hoth in the 400 block of North College Street in Tucumcari.

Hoth and a female lived in their recreational vehicle on his property for the last two months, according to a release from Carl Christiansen, NMSP spokesman.

State police took over the investigation, said Lt. Herbert Hinders.

According to the affidavit for arrest:

■ On Tuesday morning, Bamberg said he was awakened by a tenant living on his property and informed his parrot had been attacked by a neighbor's dog.

■ Bamberg said he confronted the dog owner then went to confront Hoth about leaving the front gate open.

■ Bamberg said after the confrontation, Hoth exited the RV with a metal object in his hand. He said he went into his residence, grabbed his shotgun, exited the house and after a confrontation shot Hoth.

"I was drinking my coffee outside when I heard a gunshot, then I heard a second gun shot and a woman screaming," said Pablo Benavidez, a neighbor.

Hinders said at 8:20 a.m., officers of the Tucumcari Police Department responded to the initial call at a residence on the 400 block of North College Street.

He said the responding officers located one deceased individual at the residence.

Neighbors were questioned by NMSP officers and three individuals were spotted being taken from the scene by law enforcement officials.

Hinders would not comment on why the individuals were taken from the scene.

Bamberg is being held at the Quay County Detention Center with no bond.

Fishing report

The fishing report has been generated from the best information available from Department of Game and Fish officers and anglers. Conditions encountered after the report is compiled may differ, however, as stream, lake and weather conditions alter fish and angler activities.

Blue Hole Park Pond: We had no reports from anglers this week.

Clayton Lake: Fishing was slow and fishing pressure was very light. The boat ramp is now open.

Conchas Lake: The lake came up about eight feet this past week and fishing slowed considerably. A few largemouth bass and smallmouth bass were caught.

Oasis Park Lake: Fishing was slow for all species.

Santa Rosa Lake: Fishing was slow to fair using top water lures, crank baits, creature baits, jigs, tubes and jerk baits for largemouth bass and smallmouth bass. Fishing was slow to fair using chicken liver and shrimp on trotlines for catfish. We had no other reports.

Sumner Lake: Fishing was slow for all species. Fishing pressure was light.

Ute Lake: Fishing for largemouth bass and smallmouth bass picked up a bit this past week. Anglers found them in the shallows and did well using buzz baits, flukes, tubes, creature baits and jerk baits. Fishing was fair trolling crank baits for walleye. Fishing for catfish was good for anglers using stink baits and cut bait.

Catch of the week

■ Conchas Lake: Mike Estrada of Belen caught and released a 4.38-pound largemouth bass Aug. 26. He was using a green jig with a green pumpkin Yamamoto baby craw trailer.

■ Ute Lake: Laura Elkins of Amarillo, Texas caught and released a 4.04 smallmouth bass Aug. 27.

Returning home to finish his education, he married Helen Cunningham before graduating and moving to San Jon, New Mexico. Legend has it, she stated it would do until he could get a good job. He stayed 31 years at the school, teaching Math and Science at multiple levels. He helped build and establish a church in San Jon and often preached there as well as other locations in the area.

Loved fishing, and especially camping at Southfork near Bonita Lake in Ruidoso. Close to 20 summers of camping, making hobo pies, starting campfires, and watching hummingbirds and bears. Repaired radios and televisions for many years, and kept a large portion of his garage sale finds.

After retiring, he was employed by Adult Probation and Parole in Clovis, New Mexico where he remarked he might run into some former students.

Clif was preceded in death by a daughter, Teresa.

He is survived by his wife, Helen Masters, of Amarillo; two sons, Frankie Masters and wife Jakie of Amarillo and Phil Masters and wife Linda, of Little Elm; a daughter, Elaine Masters, of Albuquerque, New Mexico; a brother, Clay Masters and wife Glenda, of Roswell; a sister, Emagene Sanders, of Green Forest, Arkansas; 8 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; and 3 great-great-grandchildren.

Moving to Amarillo in 2012, he united with family and friends that once were his "kiddos" at the campground. An active member of the Amarillo Church of Christ, often encouraging youth, and college students to move to a positive place in their lives. He influenced many lives through teaching and preaching, and all had to taste his sense of humor which never left him, even in the last days of his life.

MainStreet gets $16K grant

❑ Local bank provides matching funds to help pay for revitalization.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

Tucumcari MainStreet's efforts to revitalize the downtown attractions of the city got a $16,000 boost thanks to a grant from a local bank and its partners.

The $16,000 grant funds were presented to Gail Houser, executive director of the Tucumcari MainStreet Corporation on Aug. 30, by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas and Tucumcari Federal Savings and Loan Association.

"These funds will go a long way to helping improve the downtown attractions of Tucumcari," Houser said.

This partnership grant program depends on the input from our member banks to let us know where the money could best be used to aid in the development of the economy and community, said Greg Hettrick, first vice president, director of community investment, FHLB Dallas.

> "As a boy, I spent a lot of time with my dad building model railroads. Spending time at this depot has really been a treat."
> — FHLB Dallas First Vice President of Community Investment Greg Hettrick

Hettrick said the Tucumcari Train Depot is a great example of MainStreet's efforts to revitalize the community. He said one of the best part of the partnership grant is the funds are not restricted to one particular use or project.

"As a boy, I spent a lot of time with my dad building model railroads," Hettrick said. "Spending time at this depot has really been a treat."

Anytime a project in our area can receive funding is a time to celebrate, said Sen. Patrick Woods.

Woods said organizations like Tucumcari MainStreet are vital to continuing the economic prosperity of rural communities. He said the projects continue to improve the downtown economy while bringing in business to the community as a whole.

"We appreciate the donations of these funds to our community," said Ruth Ann Litchfield, Mayor.

The staff, members of Tucumcari Federal Saving and Loan Association were proud to have the opportunity to aid our local community, said David Hale, president of TFSL.

"It has been the goal of Tucumcari Federal to help promote the growth of Tucumcari for the prosperity of the community," Hale said.

The grant is funded by a 3-to-1 match by FHLB and TFSL, Hale said Tucumcari Federal donated $4,000 that was match by $12,000 by FHLB, Dallas.

Houser said the grant funds will be used to offset annual operating expenses, continue educational opportunities for entrepreneurs and develop fundraising programs.

under water.

"I grabbed the important documents (social security cards, birth certificates) and clothes, packed it into a bag and we left," Padilla said.

Wilson said the boat transported the family to a school out of the flood zone. He said from their the family was loaded onto a bus and taken to a hotel.

"In the course of the trip we lost some of our luggage," Wilson said. "That didn't matter though, when we witnessed firsthand the chaos from the storm at the school."

Padilla said they were able to return to their home on Thursday, and discovered the bayou was able to handle the inflow and the house was not flooded.

She said unfortunately many of their neighbors' homes were flooded and damaged by the water.

"We are helping our next door neighbor remove the damaged dry wall," Padilla said. "It still doesn't seem real that all of this happened. Everyone is still on edge. It certainly doesn't help that there is the possibility of another storm hitting this area."

GOD ON THE SIDEWALK

As I stride down the sidewalk in the brisk morning air, I meet many children on their way to school. I greet them with "Good morning" or "Hi." Some of them answer, most do not. I notice that the younger ones are more likely to answer. The older children are more cautious, more suspicious of a friendly adult. Whether individually or in pairs, they are noticeably self-absorbed. They do not realize that I taught children for over thirty years. I know about their lost homework, their dysfunctional families, their peer pressure, their eagerness for positive attention.

This morning, I get a glimpse of how God feels repeatedly. He speaks to us and sometimes we answer. He understands our situations and challenges, but we don't take that into account. Newer Christians are more enthusiastic about speaking to God every day, but some of us who have been Christians for a while have lost that eagerness for a relationship with our Father. He knows our lost loved ones, our dysfunctional families, our peer pressures, and our eagerness for his loving attention.

If we give Him eye contact, and respond to his call, He will be there to guide us throughout the day.

Holding budget hostage for wall pure nonsense

Last week, President Trump raised the possibility of shutting down the federal government unless Congress agrees to fund his "big, beautiful border wall" along the 1,989-mile U.S.-Mexico border — a wall he still says Mexico will pay for, despite repeated denials by the Mexican government.

There's little question border security is as important as it is non-existent. Border states like New Mexico that are dealing with drugs and crime know that better than anyone.

But New Mexico is also highly dependent on federal jobs, and our workforce also knows better than anyone that furloughs don't pay the bills and government closures have far-reaching costs.

(The Office of Management and Budget says the two-week shutdown in 2013 racked up billions in compensation costs, billions in interest on payments owed to third parties the government was unable to pay, kept 120,000 private-sector jobs from being created, cost $500 million in lost visitor spending because of closed National Parks — and those are just the high points.)

Given the far more pressing challenges Congress will face when members return to Washington from the Labor Day weekend — including Trump's promised rewrite of the federal tax code, raising the debt ceiling and reauthorizing programs for flood insurance and children's health — shutting down the federal government over his border wall is sure to backfire on Trump and congressional Republicans.

With the House and Senate scheduled to be in session for only 12 concurrent days, and the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, holding the federal budget hostage over a wall of questionable value makes no sense.

Poll after poll has shown that, at best, about 35 percent of Americans support Trump's wall.

Border Patrol apprehensions along the U.S. Mexico border have plummeted from 1.6 million in 2000 to 415,816 in 2016.

The vast majority of illegal drugs flowing north from Mexico is moving through ports of entry, not on the backs of illegal border-crossers.

Roughly 700 miles of the border are already protected by physical barriers. Building an additional 1,000 miles of "border wall" is estimated to cost $40 billion.

It's undeniable that the United States needs to do a better job of controlling its borders, and it's been doing a better job by adding thousands of new Border Patrol agents, deploying far more electronic surveillance, and apprehending and deporting criminals who are here illegally.

The real answer is not a wall — it's comprehensive immigration reform that addresses not only future illegal entry and homeland security, but also deals fairly with the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants already here.

If President Trump can get Congress to work on things like immigration reform, it will be far less expensive, pay far higher public safety dividends and improve our nation's needlessly testy relationship with Mexico far more than threats to shut down government.

It's always good to get back home

By the time this column is published, I will be back from California.

As I write, I haven't left yet.

You can make the drive to where I'm going, a few miles short of Los Angeles proper, in one hard day, which is what I intend to do.

I've got some old friends who make an annual visit worth the effort, while reminding myself of why I left the smog-tarnished Golden State in the first place.

As hot weather fades in our corner of New Mexico, it is just starting in the inland valleys near Los Angeles. I have one outdoor event to attend and my cell phone weather forecast says it's going to be about 110 degrees. I am assured that afternoon breezes will make it all worthwhile, but I doubt it.

Breezes on hot days in the California inland valleys used to make me feel like a turkey in a convection oven.

Seeing some old friends is also worth getting back to the routine of standing in lines. I used to think Californians could not have fun unless they stood in line for it.

I'm planning on standing in line to get a table in a restaurant, get an In 'n' Out burger or buy just about anything.

A trip to Disneyland, for example, usually results in six hours of standing in lines to enjoy two hours or so of rides.

To many, many Californians, however, this rushing cacophony is home. The upside of crowds, traffic, smog, noise and frustration is a huge variety of things to do, new things to try and top-of-the-line entertainment and cultural experiences.

They would no sooner leave the Los Angeles area than many ranchers would leave a life that features working outside with no set hours, horseback riding, watching things grow and enjoying the light playing on the mesas at sunrise and sunset.

I spent my adolescence and early adult life in Montana and West Virginia, surrounded more by mountain valleys and forests than by cars and confusion.

Since then, I've spent more time in urban areas, but I never got used to crowds and rushing.

I can still go back there, however, to see people I've missed and even enjoy the faster pace for a few days, but I'll still be glad to get back home.

Whenever you see footage of our vaunted prime-time news reporters visiting a combat zone, take careful note of what they wear.

For some reason they seem to believe that one item of clothing that is required to be a real honest to goodness combat correspondent is a shirt with epaulettes.

Even better than that is some sort of bush jacket with the same accessory.

Always conscience of the importance of appearances, reporters feel the need to look the part.

Image is everything to reporters, and that may be why they ambushed First Lady Melania Trump for her choice of footwear when she left the White House for the ride down to flood-damaged Houston.

She chose a pair of Manolo Blahnik stiletto heels for her walk to the helicopter and that sent the chattering class to chattering.

In point of fact, the only shoes in the first lady's closet may be Manolos and as a professional model she may be the only first lady able to have made the trip without a fashion mishap.

Continuing in the same vein, reporters ridiculed the president when he donated a million dollars to the Hurricane Harvey relief fund.

It wasn't enough, it was a drop in the bucket, he planned to get it all back on his taxes, he would use it as advertising for all the illegal business he was operating while president.

When the president arrived in Texas, the media wanted to portray him as a comforter in chief, or a consoler in chief, or wanted to grade him on whether or not he could pass some sort of empathy test.

Trump instead served as a cheerleader for the relief effort and when he told the crowd that, "Texas can handle anything" they roared their approval.

Hurricane Harvey victims agreed their opinion of the president changed after they met him with comments like, "I think he's a wonderful man" and "I found him kind and reassuring."

Causing further consternation for the press were some people in the crowds yelling, "Fake news" at press vans. Others were holding signs that showed support for the first lady and her high heels. They urged her to continue to wear the stilettos.

After almost nine months in office, the press still doesn't get the Trump phenomenon. They never will, even after he completes his two terms.

Appearances are everything. If Hillary had tried to wear stilettos down the steps at the White House, she would have injured herself.

Badly.

Rattlers hope to build off win

❑ Tucumcari uses balanced attack to top Chargers; will host Estancia Friday night.

The Tucumcari Rattlers will try to carry over the momentum from Saturday's road win into their Friday night home game against the Estancia Bears.

The Rattlers (1-1) are coming off a 39-23 victory over the Albuquerque Academy Chargers. Tucumcari's offense produced a balanced 371 yards of total offense, with 180 passing and 191 rushing.

Senior full back Xavier Garcia led the Rattler backfield with 134 yards and two touchdowns. Rattler quarterback junior Casey Carter connected with three different receivers for touchdowns — a 65-yard pass to Gerardo Villa-Vargas, 25-yard pass to Rod Dunlap and a 14-yard pass to Seth Martinez.

"The team did a great job of shaking off last week's loss to produce a win on the road," said Wayne Ferguson, Rattlers head coach.

Ferguson the Rattlers were able to execute their assignments on offense to produce the scoring drives. He said on defense the Rattlers did a good job of stopping the Chargers from sustaining a drive.

"We did have two run backs on defense, those were due to a break down in coverage," Ferguson said. "We still have some areas to address but overall the Rattlers did good."

Ferguson said next the Rattlers will focus on the 0-2 Bears. He said the Rattlers know they can not look at the Bears lightly due to their record.

"The team is practicing every week for battle," Ferguson said. "We continue to push our players and tell them no week is an easy week."

The Bears and Rattlers will kick off at 7 p.m.

Six-man

The San Jon/Grady Coyotes won their home opener 54-0 against the Hondo Valley Eagles at San Jon.

Defense was the key to the Coyotes' victory against the Eagles. The defense recovered two fumbles and intercepted the ball twice, each leading to a score by the Coyotes offense.

The turnovers led to a 24-yard rush by Jay Teachout in the first, a 50-yard pass from Chance Shaw to Jake Thurman and a 10-yard rush by Thurman in the second and an 80-yard rush by Thurman in the third.

"The defense stepped it up in a big way, they produced some turnover opportunities and also held strong when needed," said Adrian Jones, head coach.

The Coyotes had two turnovers, a fumble in the second quarter and a fumbled onside kick recovery in the third quarter. Jones said the defense did not get discouraged, they went out and forced a four and out by the Eagles offense.

"We would not let the turnovers get us down," Shaw said, "We knew we had to keep our heads up and try and make a play."

For three quarters the Coyotes defense held the Redemption and a tournament championship are two perks the Logan Lady Longhorns earned Saturday during the Lady Rattlers' volleyball tournament a the Snake Pit.

The Lady Longhorns' 3-2 championship win over the Santa Fe Waldorf Lady Wolves was hard fought and will give the girls confidence as the season progresses, said Robert Young, Lady Longhorns head coach.

"You can see the improvement we have made from last year," said Kylee Foote, Lady Longhorn outside hitter.

Foote said against the Lady Wolves, the team knew it was going to have to step up their floor defense against Rose Moon, Santa Fe outside hitter. She said the team recalled Moon's ability to earn a kill point from last year's tournament.

"She brings some power when she hits," Foote said.

The Lady Longhorns lost the first match but took the second and third sets. However, the Lady Wolves rallied in the fourth set to over come a 20-17 deficit to win 25-23.

The Lady Longhorns jumped out early in the final set for a commanding 15-4 win over the Lady Wolves.

"The girls have improved their passing from the back row that allows them to set up the offense," Young said.

To advance to the championship game, the Lady Longhorns had to face a familiar foe, one who just a week earlier swept them in their home tournament championship.

The Floyd Lady Broncos tried to earn a second tournament victory over Logan but fell short in five sets.

Eastern New Mexico sophomore quarterback Wyatt Strand completes a red zone pass in Thursday's game against Southwest Baptist. Strand accounted for 173 yards of offense, including a 20-yard run on a fourth-and-13 that set up Bailey Hale's game-winning field goal with :07 to play.

ENMU upsets Bearcats on late FG

❑ Late FG leads to 23-21 win; team back in action Saturday in Silver City.

PORTALES — A 20-yard run by Eastern New Mexico University quarterback Wyatt Strand on fourth-and-12 set up a game-winning 41-yard field goal by Bailey Hale with just seven seconds remaining to complete the Greyhounds 23-21 victory over No. 18 Southwest Baptist in their season opener.

ENMU (1-0) looked down-and-out when the Bearcats stopped a fourth-and-2 run by running back Kamal Cass and took over at the Greyhounds 19-yard line with three minutes left to play.

Greyhounds

That was before ENMU's defense stuffed three straight runs and Toby Amadi blocked a 46-yard field goal attempt that would've put SBU up four.

"Found a way, found a way. Just resilient, we found a way to win. Defense played lights out tonight," Greyhounds coach Kelley Lee said.

A pair of unsportsmanlike conduct penalties by the Bearcats advanced the ball to the SBU 42-yard line following the blocked kick, providing vital field position for an ENMU offense, which had managed just 71 second-half yards up to that point.

"Last year we kind of traded some of those (penalties) with them and this year we really stressed to our kids that we weren't going to have any of those confrontations, and if somebody was going to make a mistake with penalties we were hoping it would be them, so it worked out that way on that last drive," Lee said.

Known for its triple option run attack, ENMU showed off its passing game in the first quarter as Strand completed a 56-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Johnny Smith and a 30-yard pass to wide receiver Tayshaun Gary to set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Cass.

"We're a big time running offense but it sets up a lot of our throws because the defense gets to move in and stuff, so if we run the ball right the passing game is going to be open because it just opens up for us," Strand said.

SBU opened the scoring with a 62-yard pass from quarterback TJ Edwards to wide receiver Cassian Foreman just 1:20 into the game.

Edwards added a 1-yard rushing touchdown when he faked a pitch to the running back before diving over the goal line to tie the game at 14 early in the second quarter.

The Bearcats later scored the only touchdown of the second half with a perfectly-executed double pass when Edwards lateraled to wide receiver Kendrick Payne, who then found Chris Robb streaking down the sidelines for a 35-yard score.

The Greyhounds defense otherwise limited SBU's scoring with a trio of stops inside ENMU's 30-yard line.

Linebacker Zach Johnson stopped an Edwards rush for no gain to force a turnover on downs from the 26-yard line in the second quarter and linebacker Desmond Blue sacked Edwards for a 21-yard loss to push the Bearcats out of field goal range in the third quarter, in addition to the blocked field goal late in the fourth.

"I thought our defense had some phenomenal plays in the green zone, forcing them into fourth down," Lee said. "They were put in a couple of bad situations and overcame it, I just thought the resiliency and playing 60 minutes of football was tremendous."

Linebacker Fe'ao Vunipola led the Greyhounds with nine tackles and defensive end KeAndre Hall also added a sack and a fumble recovery.

Hale accounted for all of ENMU's points over the final three quarters, with field goals of 36 yards in the second quarter and 41late in the third in addition to the game-winning kick.

ENMU returns to action next Saturday when it travels to Western New Mexico to open Lone Star Conference play against the Mustangs at noon.

Acts feel not that random

Tennessee Titans wide receiver Rishard Matthews, left, is given a flag by Air Force Master Sgt. Trae Clark prior to an Aug. 27 game against the Chicago Bears in Nashville.

CLOVIS — Trae Clark believes in random acts, and he does them whenever he can. But he thinks the act he just finished Sunday wasn't random at all.

The intricate series of events that put a jersey in his hands and Air Force-flown flags in two others, Clark said, all came together for a reason.

"This is all God," Clark said. "This started at a Bible study."

The Tennessee Titans website and social media accounts include clips of a flag presented to receiver and former Clovis High athlete Rishard Matthews before the Titans' preseason game against the Chicago Bears.

The whole story starts in Clovis, swings halfway across the world and ends in Nashville to show how tragedy and kindness can bring people together.

Clark, now a master sergeant in the Air Force, is 14 years into his military career and nearly four years into his current assignment at Cannon Air Force Base.

The Nashville, Tennessee, native was serving in the 318th at Cannon. He was first sergeant for the squadron, and ran the pre-flight checklist on a March 14 training exercise flown by Capt. Andrew Becker, Capt. Kenneth Dalga and 1st Lt. Frederick Dellecker.

The exercise ended in a crash that claimed all three airmen, and Clark was in a haze for weeks after the event. He shared the story at the next Bible study, while admitting he didn't feel like being there that night.

In that same Bible study was Cal Fullerton. While he was experiencing professional triumph, having recently ascended to head football coach at Clovis High, he was also suffering loss. Less than two weeks before accepting the position, Fullerton's brother-in-law, Heath Bennett, suffered an aneurysm. The condition went quickly from, "He'll be out of the hospital in two or three days," to brain-dead. The family cut off life support, and Bennett died Feb. 10.

Bennett was known in the local pilot community, and Fullerton admitted when news first hit of a crash at Clovis Municipal Airport, he prayed it didn't happen to anybody in his circle.

That prayer was answered, until a stranger at Bible study said he didn't want to be there that night.

"He got to talking about it, and it touched my heart," Fullerton said. "He was always wearing Tennessee Titans stuff. I still didn't know him very well — we didn't talk after Bible study that night — but I knew I needed to do something for him."

Fullerton coached Matthews during the receiver's junior year in Clovis, and always kept in touch after Matthews left Clovis for California. Fullerton called with a simple request: I'll buy a jersey, you sign it and send it back. Matthews didn't know any details about Clark, but he'd do anything for Fullerton. He insisted on handling it himself, and a jersey was in Fullerton's hands a few weeks later.

Over those weeks, Clark went to funeral services at Cannon and across the country for the fallen airmen. At Becker's service in Michigan, he learned Becker's widow started a movement called #RandomActsforAndy based on the power of a random act of kindness.

He experienced it in May, when a guy he barely knew presented him a signed Matthews jersey in Bible study.

"I didn't know anything about Cal," Clark said. "I didn't know he was Coach Cal. For him to do that, it lifted my spirits up."

The night Clark received the Matthews jersey, he flipped through his Titans calendar and saw Matthews was the featured Titan in March, the month of the crash. Suddenly, things didn't feel so random.

Clark thought of repaying Fullerton. He remembered the Titans often worked out at nearby Fort Campbell in Kentucky, so he secured a summer workout for Clovis football players.

Clark thought of repaying Matthews, who sent the jersey himself instead of handing it off to team staff. Then he remembered a Memorial Day story that featured Matthews discussing his late brother.

Christopher Ruiz was a 10-year Marine veteran, and was a military contractor aboard a a C-130 that crashed Oct. 2, 2015, in Afghanistan. He was less than four weeks away from returning to California to be with his family.

Ruiz and Matthews were technically stepbrothers, but Matthews said the guy who kept him grounded during his college career and early NFL days is as close to a blood relative as it gets.

"My dad was military, so he was pretty strict," Matthews said. "I just remember us trying to come up with clever ways to get out of the house, stay away longer, have fun. It would always work for him, but it would never work for me."

Christopher was also really good at football, Matthews said, but gave it up early in high school to pursue the military path. His brother took his military commitment seriously, but still managed to be the person who could make you laugh on the darkest days.

The crash is still difficult for Matthews to handle, nearly two years later. Ruiz, through no choice of his own, left behind Matthews, high-school sweetheart wife Lorelyn, son Carter and daughters Brooklyn and Aria.

"We both took different paths in life, and we weren't as close as we know we should have been," Matthews said. "We were getting closer, and this whole thing happened. We were close when it happened, but we were definitely living two different lives."

Unbeknownst to Fullerton and Matthews, Clark got to work. He bought two flags and sent them with deploying airmen. One was flown in Iraq in honor of Fullerton, the other in Afghanistan in honor of Ruiz.

Fullerton's flag was presented during Clovis two-a-days, along with an undisclosed gift from Becker's widow to replace team equipment.

For Matthews' presentation, Clark was going to the game anyway, and a fellow squadron member from Nashville knew a girl who handled community coordinator duties for the team.

The Titans loved the pitch from Clark. The team kept the presentation secret, and on game day asked Matthews to help honor a military family. Clark introduced himself as the random guy from Clovis who got that signed jersey, and it became apparent it was Matthews' family being honored.

"All of that hit me at once," said Matthews, who now texts back-and-forth with Clark and is planning to mail a few more packages. "I didn't think I would ever see the person I got that jersey for. I was thankful for him, people like him and his family. They show during the darkest times, there's always light."

Clark plans to continue doing #RandomActsforAndy, because his flight commander's memory deserves to endure. But what started with a jersey and ended with a flag never felt random.

"You don't know what impact you can have on somebody else's life," Clark said, "or the impact they can have on yours."

I wasn't sure what to say about Monday, when a Clovis teenager walked into Clovis-Carver Public Library with a pair of handguns, and exacted revenge for who-knows-what against people he'd never met — fatally shooting two beloved librarians and injuring four others.

There's a helpless feeling knowing my words won't matter — and it pains somebody who has built a career on words mattering to admit that. We're so dug in to our partisan beliefs that no tragic event — even one that's literally on Main Street — can get to us without first permeating our partisan filters.

"Guns don't kill people, people do. ... People are more efficient killers with unfettered access to guns. ... Everybody should have a gun for their own protection. ... The shooter used guns his family bought for protection."

Why have we dug in? First, a joint statement from the New Mexico Democratic and Republican parties.

"New Mexico's political parties joined efforts this afternoon, giving back to the community during a tragic week. In the wake of a violent shooting in Clovis and a disastrous hurricane in Texas, the state's political party staff members donated blood at United Blood Services. Both parties put aside political differences to help communities during these hard times."

We got that press release on Tuesday. After careful consideration, I have a followup question. Would you (expletive deleted)s like a medal, or the common sense to not expect one?

Let's start here: I'm a blood donor, and I've been one for a long time. I was reminded of it when UBS gave me a card and a pin for reaching the gallon mark Aug. 24.

Donating blood is the real life practice of Murphy's Law. If the screening questions take too long, you should have filled out an online form in advance. Fill out the form in advance, and the scanner that reads it is broken. Appointment or not, form or not, the process always stretches beyond an hour.

And sometimes things go wrong. During my recent donation, the needle didn't stick right, and we had to stop halfway through.

But I put up with it, I give and I encourage others do the same. What happens when you donate is trivial. What happens after you donate matters. Car crash and shooting victims shouldn't have to worry there won't be extra blood.

I read the card while waiting for a donation chair to open up, and this week rescued it from the temporary trash can known as my car floor to repost it here: "No one gave you a parade. The news didn't cover your story. You are unknown to those you help. And yet you never stop. You are a hero."

That's the way it should be. "Anonymous to anonymous," not, "Could you fit 'selfless' in the headline?"

Our state's political parties asked The News to cover their self-thrown parade, and I feel no guilt for wanting to rain on it.

I say that because I know they'll soon revert to reflexively bickering like toddlers over who got the larger scoop of ice cream. Still wondering why people dig in politically no matter what? Attitude reflects leadership.

I say this with 100 percent sincerity: Thank you to all blood donors, anonymous and loud. We're a better society when we give to those who can't pay us back.

To our state party leaders, thank you for clarifying what I've long pondered. What, exactly, will it take for you to put the people of New Mexico above your partisan interests?

Now we know: People have to die for Republican and Democratic leaders to work together. As callous as it was to suspect that was the answer, it's infinitely more depressing to have it confirmed.

Locals travel to help Houston

Portales Fire Department 2nd Lt. Gary Rains, left, and Fire Chief Gary Nuckols prepare a pallet of water to be loaded.

PORTALES — Tyler Lucas intended to bring a single small trailer of supplies for the hurricane-stricken communities on the Texas Gulf Coast. He started that effort Thursday morning, and by Sunday evening he and four others departed for Houston hauling about 40,000 pounds of water and food.

"I said if I was going to go down there I might as well take some supplies with me, and it kind of just blew up from there," said Lucas, a Clovis firefighter. "I was definitely surprised by the support we got from the community and local businesses."

Portales Fire Chief Gary Nuckols estimated the value of the supplies donated by area residents and businesses to exceed $100,000.

"This is by far the largest effort I have ever participated in, not just with the fire department but in my life," he said. "I knew people would turn out, but what they turned out and brought is what really surprised and overwhelmed us. Our truck room basically turned into a packing and shipping terminal for about four straight days, with an assembly line packing boxes as fast they can ... We went from a small hand operation to an industrial operation with large equipment."

Donations from local grocery stores, churches and individuals amounted to 12 pallets of water, 14 pallets of food, "a lot of clothing" and $1,500 cash, to include a loan of a tractor trailer and a semi-trailer to carry it out, said Nuckols.

Nuckols said the trip would not have been possible without those vehicle loans. The trailer and semi were donated for temporary use by Dennis Bear of Arch and Collin Chandler of Floyd, respectively.

The swiftness and volume of the community's response was well illustrated after officials asked for bread, added Nuckols.

"We put out a little campaign Saturday night that they were in desperate need of bread — because we had lots of donations of peanut butter and canned meat and so on and so forth, but nothing for them to put it on," he said. "By Sunday morning our truck room looked like literally a sea of bread. The community responded immediately and I don't believe our stores had much bread left other than hamburger and hot dog buns the next day."

All those supplies were carefully packed, shrinkwrapped and conveyed Monday morning to the town of Lumberton, about an hour east of Houston. Lucas and three Portales firefighter lieutenants — Dathan Culpepper, Scott Watson and Johnny Rains, as well as Rains' father, Gary — were en route back home the same day.

The contingent was originally destined for a food bank in Austin, but later decided to bring the resources directly to an outlying community that had previously experienced delays in service.

"We ended up talking to some missionaries that have churches east of Houston that serve four or five different communities very much like Portales, and we were able to take that food directly to them," said Nuckols. "It actually dropped right where the need was, where the people were hungry. That to me is the best part of the mission."

Lucas said much of the damaged areas were cordoned off as he came into town, but he was struck by the turnout from responders across the country.

"The only thing that really stuck out in our minds as fas the disaster going on was a very large presence from outside communities," he said. "There were a lot of fire engines and police cars form as far away as Indiana and Forth Worth, just from all over the country."

There are others from eastern New Mexico also assisting with relief efforts, and planning to stay in the area for a while.

Mark Myers left Monday afternoon with "a couple of trucks and a couple of milk trailers," part of a collaboration between Western Dairy Transport and MyMar Terminal Service Trucks. Normally the two are business competitors, said Myers, but they worked together this week out of a mutual interest in "helping the humanitarian effort."

This is Myers' first effort assisting a disaster area, but he said he's prepared to stick it out as long as necessary. His destination was Beaumont, where the trucks would service a "15,000-person refugee camp.

"I have set up things so we can stay out there pretty much as long as they need us — nine months or whatever," he said. "We've got our tents and our water and our MREs with us so we're ready for whatever."

Those efforts are supported and at least partly compensated by FEMA funds, which also supported another truck convoy led by Portales' Ryan Ainsworth.

This is not Ainsworth's first rodeo. His company, "Ryan's Water Service," has assisted with numerous disaster responses, including oil spills, tornados, forest fires and other hurricanes.

He specializes in hauling fresh drinking water to camps of displaced persons, and vacuuming away gray water from the temporary showers and laundry sites. Six individuals from Clovis and Portales accompanied Ainsworth west on Saturday, and five more are expected.

School has started so watch out for the young'uns as they walk to school or wait for the bus. As we're getting back into the swing of things, particularly, trying to be ready when the bus comes, I'm reminded of an incident that took place near the end of the last school year.

We were under a plague of flies and while waiting for the bus one morning, our grandson came to me and stated proudly and with determination, "I crushed one of those big flies; one down, a lot to go!"

That reminded me of a sermon illustration I heard years ago: A little boy was at the beach and each time a wave came in and receded, what looked like millions of starfish were left stranded. The boy was picking them up one at a time and throwing them back into the ocean. An adult who'd been watching told the boy that there were so many starfish that he couldn't save them all, but as he picked up another starfish and threw it, the little boy responded, "Yea, but I just made a big difference for that one!" He was doing what he could to help the individuals he contacted.

Many times Christians feel that, because they don't have one of the "great" talents (speaking, writing, or leadership), they can't have a great impact for God.

Some things (like what's being taught in some churches) are far from the truth and the concept that one can't make a positive contribution because they're not talented or gifted in the same way as someone else or that they don't have the elevated status others have is pretty far off base.

In 1 Corinthians chapters 12 and 13, Paul said we should eagerly desire faith, hope, and love, which are greater gifts than those mentioned above along with those that are no longer available (prophecy, healing, working miracles, and speaking in tongues).

When we desire and use the gifts of faith, hope, and love, we show the love of God by sharing our faith with others to give them the opportunity to have the hope of living with God for eternity, all of which they have to claim for themselves as God has directed (John 1:12; Galatians 3:26-4:7). This is why Paul said he'd do whatever he could to lead whoever he met to salvation (1 Corinthians 9:19-23).

Are you doing what you can to share your faith, hope, and love with others, even on a one-by-one basis?

Your attitude at home or work and how you perform your duties and behave should be a testimony to your faith without ever having to say a word (Ephesians 6:5-9; Colossians 3:22-4:1; 1 Peter 3:1-7).

Jesus publicly acknowledged a woman for just doing what she could and he'll do the same for us if we do what we can (Mark 14:3-9; Matthew 10:23-33; 25:14-46). He doesn't expect us to do more than we can, but he does expect us to do what we can.

"We had a chip on our shoulders, but we were not going to let them get into our head," Foote said.

The team knew they could not afford to get down if a mistake was made against Floyd, said Kippi Webb, Logan middle hitter.

"If one player let's their spirit get down the entire team is brought down," Webb said. "We have to believe in each other, play as a team and never quit on ourselves or each other."

The San Jon Lady Coyotes earned the consolation championship Saturday at the Snake Pit with a 3-1 victory over the Jal Lady Panthers.

"This tournament gave the girls a great opportunity to compete against some high caliber teams," said Jaree Elliott, San Jon head coach.

Elliott said the team showed a lot of growth since start of the tournament's pool play. She said the team had a chance to play against teams at their level, while also having to play up to the level of other teams.

"This tournament has built confidence for the Lady Coyotes," Elliott said.

The Lady Rattlers did not repeat a home tournament win, but they gained a lot of experience from the tournament, said Dana Benavidez, Tucumcari head coach.

Benavidez said the team's communication on the floor improved throughout the tournament. She said the team had the benefit of competing against a variety of teams.

"Each team brings something new for the girls to learn," Benavidez said. "Overall this tournament helped to bring the team closer together."
