Residents concerned about nuclear waste

□ The borehole test is research for its disposal, according to the DOE.

Recent concerns from Quay County residents about the deposit of nuclear waste during a proposed deep borehole test near Nara Visa are understandable, according to Chip Cameron, ENERCON Federal Services Inc. spokesman. “Public approval and community support are a top priority for this project,” Cameron said.

The Atlanta-based ENERCON and DOSECC Exploration Services of Salt Lake City were selected by the Department of Energy last month to begin exploring the possibility of conducting a deep borehole field test near Nara Visa in Quay County.

“There are increased concerns when the words ‘nuclear waste’ are brought up,” Cameron said. “In this case, we want to ensure the residents of Nara Visa and Quay County there are no trucks full of nuclear waste heading their way.”

Deep boreholes are narrow, vertical holes drilled deep into the earth, in this case to a depth of approximately three miles below the earth’s surface. The DOE is partnering with companies to study the feasibility of engineering deep boreholes. One of the field test’s main purposes is to collect data on the type of rocks, the chemistry of the water, the depths to these rocks and water, the temperature of the rocks and other geologic data to see if nuclear waste disposal is feasible in this kind of geology.

“The Department of Energy is researching different options to develop solutions for the long-term, sustainable management of our nation’s spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste,” said Lindsey Geisler, DOE spokesperson.

According to a DOE press release the deep borehole field test is research into the options the government has regarding such disposal. The ultimate goal is Workers continue construction on Jan. 11 at Mesalands Community College’s first student housing complex, the Stampede Village.

Mesalands to offer student housing

□ Stampede Village apartments are single or double occupancy.

Mesalands Community College will soon offer housing for students for the first time in the institution’s history at a 34-bed apartment complex that will be referred to as Stampede Village.

“We are really excited about this new student housing opportunity,” said Thomas Newsom, president of Mesalands.

Newsom said Stampede Village, located at 701 W. Route 66, will be the first time students will be offered a student housing option through the college. He said that Stampede Village is a unique student housing model that will consist of one and two-bedroom, fully furnished apartments with full kitchens.

Newsom said rental costs will range from $1,550 for a double room to $2,150 for a single room, for the fall and spring semesters. He said rent will include the cost of utilities and Internet service. The apartment complex will also be protected by a security fence and will have surveillance cameras.

Newsom said with the progress of the work being done to prepare the complex the first 12 to 15-bed units will be available in the next two weeks. He said the rest of the units should be available by the summer semester. Summer semesters will be offered at a discounted rate, Newsom added.

“This may not be an option for every student attending Mesalands,” he said.

Newsom said student residents of Stampede Village will be required to sign a housing license agreement with the college, which outlines the policies and procedures for the apartment complex.

For example, only students enrolled in a minimum of 12 credit hours at Mesalands Community College will be able to reside at Stampede Village. Students will also have to agree to not have pets, alcohol or drugs on the premises.

Newsom said the new apartment complex will also give Mesalands a chance to grow with the college’s unique programs. He said those programs include the wind energy courses which attract several students from outside the region.

“It has been a challenge to the students from outside the region, because we did not have a safe and affordable housing option,” Newsom said, adding that the wind energy program is going to benefit greatly from this new housing option. He said it will present added incentive to those non-resident students drawn to the program to earn their occupational certificate or degree in wind energy technology.

Newsom said the complex will also be a benefit to the students drawn to Mesalands for the paleontology program.

“These programs attract students from across the nation and the world,” Newsom said. “These students need an easy, convenient and affordable place to live while they get their certificate or degree.”

vacant and years.

In December, the Mesalands Community College Board of Trustees approved an agreement to a two-year master lease agreement between Mesalands and Tillman Enterprises, Inc. of Clovis, according to Kimberly Hanna, director of public relations.

Hanna said students will be able to use their financial aid to help cover the cost to reside at Stampede Village. She said interested students can contact the Student Affairs Office at the college for more information.

Commission remembers John Mihm

□ Commissioner died on Dec. 19.

By Steve Hansen
QCS CORRESPONDENT

Tucumcari city commissioners took time before conducting regular business Thursday to pay tribute to John Mihm, the former District 5 commissioner who died suddenly on Dec. 19 at age 50.

Commissioners discussed how his position will be filled.

“This is hard for me,” Mayor Ruth Ann Litchfield said before she read a proclamation honoring Mihm. The proclamation was then presented to Mihm’s mother Joan Boue and her husband, John Boue.

Mihm’s place on the commission’s dais was marked with a single red rose in a vase.

The proclamation cited Mihm’s service with the U.S. Air Force and his involvement with many government, service and church organizations in Tucumcari, including the commission, the Greater Tucumcari Economic Development Corporation, the Route 66 Museum, Knights of Columbus, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and St. Anne’s Catholic Church.

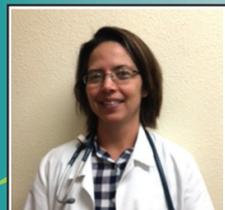

“Commissioner Mihm dedicated his life to the promotion and growth of Tucumcari and worked with passion to do everything in his power to ensure Tucumcari’s success,” Litchfield read from the proclamation.

After the presentation, Joan and John Boue thanked the Tucumcari community for its generosity and kindness.

Later in the meeting, the commission decided that Mihm’s replacement will be appointed from among applicants who live in Mihm’s district, who send in letters of interest, along with resumes and voter registration forms to demonstrate they live in the district.

Commissioners said applicants will be given 60 days to register their interest, and the application process will be advertised in the Quay County Sun. The appointed candidate

'New Mexico Music Showcase' a go

STAFF REPORT

The Tucumcari City Commission cleared the way Thursday for the first "New Mexico Music Showcase" at the Tucumcari Convention Center.

The commission authorized event sponsor Columbus Club to use $10,000 in Lodger's Tax funds — $4,000 for promotion and $6,000 to help engage musical acts for the event, which is to be held April 29.

The commission also waived convention center fees for the event.

Performers to be featured will be well-known New Mexico Latino music acts Carlos Medina con los Gallos, Darren Cordova and Calor Dynette.

These musicians are well known in northern New Mexico and are likely to attract overnight guests from that part of the state, Benjie Torres, chancellor of the Columbus Club, told commissioners at their Thursday meeting.

Torres said the musical event could attract as many as 400 people to the city, and he expects the event to be self-supporting next year.

The following was other action taken at the city commission meeting Thursday in city hall:

■ Commissioners approved spending $76,000 to replace the irrigation system at the Tucumcari Municipal Golf Course and $22,000 to pay off a loan to the golf course for well improvements. The city will use $70,000 in gross receipts capital outlay funds and $30,000 from Lodger's Tax executive funds for these purposes, and the golf course will repay these expenditures with proceeds from $200 annual golf cart shed rental fees, according to City Manager Jared Langenegger. There are 72 stalls in the sheds.

■ Commissioners gave first reading to ordinances that would make Evans Avenue a one-way, westbound street from Eighth to Ninth streets and Hines Avenue a two-way street from Fourth Street to Fifth Street.

Both of the actions were recommended by Tucumcari Public Schools and would improve traffic safety near Tucumcari Elementary School and Tucumcari Middle School, according to Project Manager Mark Martinez.

The ordinances require a public hearing and second readings to become final.

■ Commissioners approved a change order adding $21,589 to the $451,800 cost of constructing a new cell at the Tucumcari Landfill to accommodate the need for heavier equipment to work in muddy conditions.

■ Commissioners approved annual resolutions that meet state requirements to recognize the state's Open Meetings Act, hazardous materials communications and fall protection measures for city employees.

■ In the wake of Assistant City Manager Doug Powers' retirement, commissioners decided to split his $78,136.05 pay and benefits between two positions, a grant writer whose pay and benefits would total $55,920.48 and a part-time risk manager who would be paid $14,230.78 in pay and benefits. A current department head will be named assistant city manager and will have 10 percent added to their salary, according to City Manager Jared Langenegger.

Sexual orientation not a 'lifestyle'

Rube Render's Jan. 11 column headlined "Sports, government bad combination," is an accurate description of how sports organizations manipulate officials to fund their endeavors.

The Texas Rangers baseball team is a good example.

Where I disagree with Render is his position on sports organizations taking action on discriminatory laws.

When "behavior modification" involves defending a minority against an uninformed, biased law, I think the action is entirely appropriate.

The majority of major medical experts agree that a person's sexual orientation is determined prior to birth. It is not a "lifestyle."

Do you remember making the decision about which sex you were going to be drawn to?

There was no decision to be made.

There have been claims made of religious "cures" of sexual "deviants." They have never stood up to investigation.

Some other forms of "behavior modification" that should be addressed are the various laws to address "fraudulent voting." Numerous investigations have revealed about three or four fraudulent votes out of millions.

The laws are intended to keep down the number of "those votes" to sustain the status quo. Some of "those" people live in public housing.

Another position Republicans take that cannot be supported by science or facts is opposition to addressing global warming.

In scientific circles there is no debate whether or not global warming exists and human activities are the cause of it. Not addressing it will be far more expensive.

Waste

to determine if deep boreholes might offer a safe and practical alternative to mined geologic repositories for smaller forms of nuclear waste.

"It is important to note, if Nara Visa is selected for the test, at no time will any waste non or nuclear be placed into the boreholes being drilled," Cameron said.

Concerns and objections to the proposed deep borehole test and the disposal of nuclear waste in the area increased locally following an article published in the Santa Fe New Mexican with increased phone calls coming into the county, according to County Manager Richard Primrose. Area residents have also begun conversations on social media to express concerns.

"The article was brought up for discussion after the Jan. 9 County Commission meeting," said Franklin McCasland, commission chair.

The Quay County Commission unanimously voted on Oct. 10, 2016 to support the submission of a proposal by ENERCON and DOSECC to conduct the deep borehole test in Quay County.

McCasland said there has been an increase of inquiries from residents to the commissioners and county manager about the project since the article ran. He said many of the residents contacting the county for information are concerned about nuclear waste being brought into the county.

"When the county commissioners voted to support this project it was done so with the knowledge and understanding that no nuclear waste was going to be placed in the boreholes," McCasland said.

McCasland said residents can contact the commissioners and county managers if they have questions about the project. He said if the project is awarded to the area it would be a boost to the county's economy.

The article mentioned the nation's growing stockpile of high-level nuclear waste and spent fuel awaiting a final resting place and noted a reinvested interest in 2012 for deep borehole use in waste disposal and increased interest after the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant (WIPP) in Carlsbad was shut down in February 2014. It also mentioned that the Energy Department needs to drill 950 boreholes to store all of the waste sitting at 77 U.S. facilities.

"The Department of Energy has not calculated or generated any numbers concerning how many boreholes would be needed to store waste," Geisler said, adding that the project is still in the first phase of an experimental test drilling designed to determine the feasibility of boreholes being used for disposal.

Three other counties in the U.S. — Otero County in Southern New Mexico, Pecos County in Texas and Haakon County in South Dakota — are also being considered for the test drilling because they share similar geologic similarities, according to a DOE press release and a DOE blog.

"I feel that it would be a benefit should the test come to our county," said David Irwin, Nara Visa/Obar resident.

Irwin and his wife, Kay, live south of U.S. 54 opposite of Louis and Elaine James, who've agreed to lease 10 acres of their land to the government as a deep borehole test site.

"I don't see any particular problem with the project," Irwin said. "I have attended the meetings and spoke with the company officials and understand there is a slim to no chance any nuclear waste will be placed in the holes."

Phone calls and messages to concerned residents were not returned.

Cameron said if Nara Visa's site were to be selected, the contract for this project specifically prohibits the storage, disposal or use of nuclear waste at the site of the deep borehole field test. He said it is important to note that no nuclear waste will be involved in this field test, nor will the DOE use any selected test site for the actual storage or disposal of waste in the future.

Cameron said if DOSECC and ENERCON win this bid the first bore hole of 8 1/2 inches wide would take five years to complete. He said depending on a successful drilling and the information collected, a second three-mile-deep borehole, 17 inches wide, would be drilled nearby.

"Once the test drilling is done the project is completed," Cameron said.

Cameron said there will not be any further borehole development done at that site. He said the information generated by the field test will be used in future consideration to the feasibility of deep borehole waste disposal. There are numerous areas across the U.S. that share the same geological characteristics as the potential test sites, Cameron added.

Cameron said the deep boreholes will be capped and the surrounding land remediated. He said the boreholes would possibly be turned over to a college or university for geological studies and research.

"This project would be very beneficial to the local economy," Irwin said. "It is also a chance to be a part of ground breaking research. Just like going to the moon, we had to start somewhere."

Cameron said that public outreach meetings are planned to be held in February at Nara Visa. He said the meetings will be advertised to the surrounding communities to give all residents a chance to attend.

GOD ON THE SIDEWALK

As I stride down the sidewalk in the brisk morning air, I meet many children on their way to school. I greet them with "Good morning" or "Hi." Some of them answer, most do not. I notice that the younger ones are more likely to answer. The older children are more cautious, more suspicious of a friendly adult. Whether individually or in pairs, they are noticeably self-absorbed. They do not realize that I taught children for over thirty years. I know about their lost homework, their dysfunctional families, their peer pressure, their eagerness for positive attention.

This morning, I get a glimpse of how God feels repeatedly. He speaks to us and sometimes we answer. He understands our situations and challenges, but we don't take that into account. Newer Christians are more enthusiastic about speaking to God every day, but some of us who have been Christians for a while have lost that eagerness for a relationship with our Father. He knows our lost loved ones, our dysfunctional families, our peer pressures, and our eagerness for his loving attention.

If we give Him eye contact, and respond to his call, He will be there to guide us throughout the day.

King's wisdom shines beyond 'I Have a Dream'

Some important figures in American culture, even though they produced a great body of work, are most recognized for a single outstanding accomplishment.

For instance, Duke Ellington's "Take the 'A' Train," or Maya Angelou's "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," or W.E.B. Du Bois' "The Souls of Black Folk."

So, too, has Martin Luther King Jr., whose life we celebrated Monday with a federal holiday, best remembered for the speech he gave during the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom on Aug. 28, 1963.

In it are the oft-repeated lines that begin with "I have a dream ..."

The speech was one of the greatest pieces of oratory in American history — and one a nation still suffering under a fractured social structure would do well to read in its entirety and embrace today.

While there is much wisdom in the "I Have a Dream" speech, during his lifetime King expressed many more edifying thoughts. Here are some others that should not be forgotten:

■ "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere."
— Letter from Birmingham City Jail, April 16, 1963

■ "We must come to see that the end we seek is a society at peace with itself, a society that can live with its conscience. And that will be a day not of the white man, not of the black man. That will be the day of man as man."
— "How Long, Not Long" speech, March 25, 1965

■ "We must rapidly begin the shift from a 'thing-oriented' society to a 'person-oriented' society. When machines and computers, profit motives and property rights are considered more important than people, the giant triplets of racism, materialism, and militarism are incapable of being conquered."
— "Beyond Vietnam: A Time to Break Silence" speech, April 4, 1967

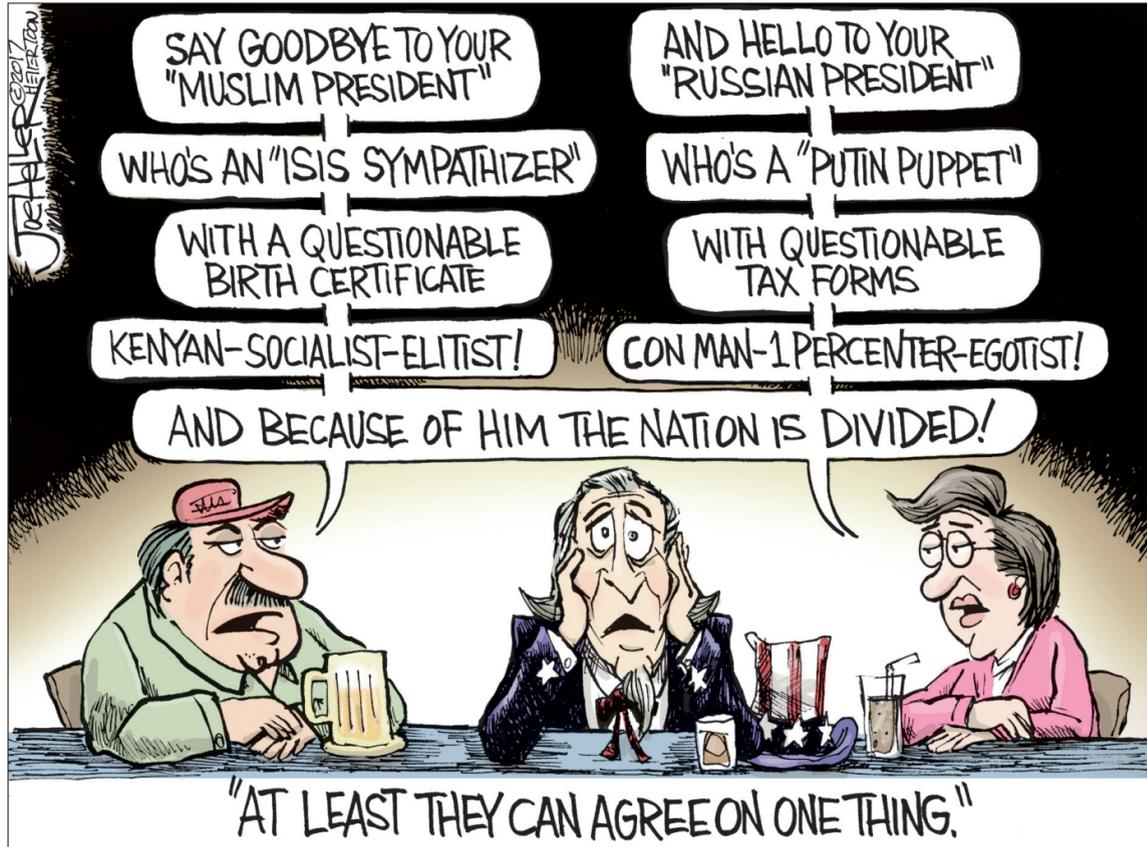

■ "The nation is sick. Trouble is in the land; confusion all around. That's a strange statement. But I know, somehow, that only when it is dark enough can you see the stars."
— "I've Been to the Mountaintop" speech, April 3, 1968

■ "I refuse to accept the view that mankind is so tragically bound to the starless midnight of racism and war that the bright daybreak of peace and brotherhood can never become a reality. ... I believe that unarmed truth and unconditional love will have the final word in reality."
— Nobel Peace Prize Acceptance Speech, Dec. 10, 1964

■ "The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy."
— from "Strength to Love," published in 1963

During these days rife with "fake news" and political hypocrisy from all quarters, it would do one well to remember King, a man who was the real thing and one willing to give all of himself to make the world a better place.

Caution vital for Obamacare fix

I have two words of advice for the Republican Congress as it gets ready to perform major surgery on Obamacare: Go slow.

Obamacare itself was passed so quickly that even its Democrat sponsors weren't able to tell you exactly what was in it.

The result seems to have been a well-meant but deeply flawed attempt to spread health insurance to everyone and get a handle on reducing at least the soaring rate of inflation in our health care costs.

So far Obamacare seems to have achieved neither goal, even though the Democrats, in my opinion, have underplayed Obamacare's benefits. They have ceded control of the message on Obamacare to GOP mouthpieces who have distorted its record and overstated its faults.

The Affordable Care Act

Steve Hansen
Local columnist

does need some overhauling, however, and I would only ask that Republicans don't repeat haste and impatience that the opposition party members demonstrated in 2009 when they rushed it through.

In the late 1990s, the California Legislature in a few quick weeks railroaded into law a bill deregulating the state's electric utility industry.

The plan was slapped together by legislators who had no real knowledge about what they were trying to build.

By the year 2000, Enron had discovered the deregulation plan's cavernous loopholes. That company learned how to manipulate power production and created artificial shortages to balloon wholesale electricity prices to many times the retail rates utilities were allowed to charge.

PG&E, the state's largest electric utility, declared bankruptcy and Southern California Edison, its next largest utility, came nearly within a coin-flip of throwing in the towel.

I was a So Cal Edison employee at the time, and my memories of that period are painful.

The state's then governor, Gray Davis, then decided to spend state dollars to keep our lights on rather than raise retail rates. From January 2001 to March 2001 alone, the state shelled out $3 billion in ransom to Enron and the other pirates, and continued to spend at that rate through bonds for nearly the entire year.

I still believe California never fully recovered from this cash-draining disaster.

Like California's spit-and-baling-wire electric deregulation plan, Obamacare was passed in a hurry and its flaws caught up with it quickly.

To me, the lesson is plain.

Even though the Republicans have made the repeal of the Affordable Care Act a top priority, I hope that caution will prevail over vengeance as they prepare their scalpels.

In the end, federal law trumps state

"No man shall be deprived of the free enjoyment of his life, liberty, or property, unless declared to be forfeited by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land."
— The Magna Carta, circa 1215

"No man's life, liberty, or property are safe while the Legislature is in session."
— Mark Twain, 1866

The U.S. Supreme Court handed down its Brown v. Board of Education decision on May 17, 1954. It ruled that segregation of public schools was unconstitutional, as they are supported by all the taxpayers.

James Meredith applied for admission to the University of Mississippi in 1961 and, after a lengthy stream of court hearings and decisions, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi directed the officials of the university to register Meredith. The Democratic governor of Mississippi, Ross Barnett, stated, "No school will be integrated in Mississippi while I am your governor."

Rube Render
Local columnist

About 500 U.S. marshals, under orders from Attorney General Robert Kennedy, accompanied Meredith during his arrival and registration. President John Kennedy also issued a proclamation directing all people engaged in obstruction to cease and desist and to disperse peacefully. The president further ordered federal troops to the campus and on Oct. 1, 1962, Meredith became the first black American to enroll at Ole Miss.

This episode determined once again that federal law takes precedent over state law, unless you happen to believe that states, counties and cities have the right to establish sanctuary cities and to legalize marijuana over the objection of the federal government.

Although the numbers are changing, 26 states, including New Mexico, currently have laws legalizing marijuana in some form. Three other states will soon join them after recently passing measures permitting use of medical marijuana.

It is highly likely that the issue of expanding New Mexico's stance on marijuana from "medical marijuana use" to "recreational use" will arise in this session of the Legislature.

Marijuana remains illegal under federal law. What is the federal stance on marijuana?

According to estimates there are about 300 jurisdictions that have a sanctuary policy of some sort, including Santa Fe. Mayors of some municipalities, most notably Chicago, Los Angeles and New York City, have publicly declared that they will continue to ignore federal law.

The Trump administration has openly announced its intent to stop this practice and to bring all entities into compliance with federal law.

As citizens, we can't choose which laws we will obey and which laws we will ignore. New Mexico's legislators would be well advised to ascertain the Trump administration's intentions on these two questions prior to any action on their part.

Rattlers to face Dexter

□ The team plays its homecoming game against Bosque on Saturday.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

The Tucumcari Rattlers have a busy week with two home games, including Saturday's homecoming game against Bosque.

The Rattlers (4-8) start things off Thursday against the Dexter Blue Demons (10-5) at the Snake Pit.

"We need to do a better job of taking care of the ball and going up strong for the basket," said John Span, Rattlers head coach.

Span said the Rattlers have to play better than they did during the Saturday 80-46 loss to the Pecos Panthers (13-1) at the Snake Pit. He said the Rattlers turned the ball over too many times to a stout Panthers team who controlled the rebounds and scored 10 three-point shots during the game.

Span said on Friday the Rattlers will travel to Logan to take on the Longhorns (6-8).

The Longhorns last game was a 68-19 win on Friday against Des Moines.

Span said to end out the week the Rattlers homecoming will be on Saturday against the Bosque Bobcats (1-15).

The following is the game schedule:

- 7 p.m. Thursday, Dexter at Tucumcari
- 7 p.m. Friday, Tucumcari at Logan
- 6 p.m. Saturday, Bosque at Tucumcari

The Tucumcari Lady Rattlers have a full week ahead of them after a week break in games.

The Lady Rattlers (11-3) last win was on Dec. 10, a 52-28 win against the Lady Bears (5-6) at Estancia.

"Having such a long break between games can make the team's senses dull," said Gary Hittson, Lady Rattlers head coach.

The Lady Rattlers week kicks-off with a match up against the Dexter Lady Demons (7-7) at the Snake Pit.

On Friday the Lady

Rattlers travel to Logan to take on the Lady Longhorns (13-2).

Saturday the Lady Rattlers wrap things up with a homecoming match against the Bosque Lady Bobcats (7-6).

"We need to come out with intensity and not look past any team," Hittson said.

The following is the schedule of games:

- 6 p.m. Thursday, Dexter at Tucumcari
- 5:30 p.m. Friday, Tucumcari at Logan
- 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Bosque at Tucumcari

Wrestlers grab first at Pecos tourney

□ Next competitions are today in Pecos, Saturday in Colorado.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

The Tucumcari Rattlers first-place finish at Saturday's wrestling tournament at Pecos is another step in their preparation for a strong district run, according to Head Coach Eddie Encinias.

"The Rattlers are about to get into the grind," Encinias said.

Encinias said the wrestlers are preparing for an endurance run with a duels competition today in Pecos and a tournament Saturday at Trinidad, Colorado.

"It's non-stop from here on out," Encinias said. "We need to get as many matches in as we can."

Encinias said they will see a few of the same teams today as they did last weekend. He said the Rattlers continue to work to improve all aspects of their skills.

"I need to work on my endurance," said Antonio Norton Jr., a 220-pound wrestler.

Norton, who placed first last weekend, said he is confident in his speed and technique but feels that increased endurance will help him win district and advance to state.

Elias Ortiz, 145 pounds, Michael Shelton, 160 pounds and Isaiah Valverde, 285 pounds also placed first last weekend at Pecos. This is the second tournament in a row for Valverde to place first.

"The team needs to keep up the intensity and work towards more wins," said Ortiz.

Rattlers Jonathan Clark, 126 pounds, and Kaleb Hayes, 182-pounds, both finished second and Xavier Garcia, 170 pounds, and Joe Martinez, 138 pounds, placed third.

"This week, I am going to work on my techniques," Martinez said, adding that as the season

Focus on God's future for you this year

Although we actually just went from one day to the next, we've just passed into a New Year.

While the 366 days to be remembered as 2016 were filled with tragedy and triumph, it isn't the focus of this article to list the epic events of the past year, whether good or bad, especially since much of it was rehashed in the media over the last few weeks. That being said, it does seem that we dwell on the tragedies and forget the triumphs.

The Bible encourages us to forget the past, good or bad, and focus on the future with hope. Forgetting the past doesn't mean that we don't learn from it. For example, by writing about how the Israelites were punished by God in the wilderness because of their idolatry, sexual immorality and grumbling, Paul warned the Corinthian church and us against falling into the temptations that are common to humankind, including becoming arrogant as God's people (1 Corinthians 10:1-13).

Leonard Lauriault

Forgetting the past means not letting our own past sins and other tragedies hold us back by distracting us from the future ahead of us. In regard to sin, this is what repentance and forgiveness and the promise of continual cleansing is all about for Christians (2 Corinthians 7:8-10; 1 John 1: 5-9). While we should never forget that we've been forgiven, the only reason we should remember our own past sins is to avoid the possibility of falling back into sin (2 Peter 1:3-11). In regard to tragedies, although it might take some time to recover, we're to rely on God and other Christians for support and use each day as a victory that strengthens us to face the next day (2 Corinthians 1:3-1-11). We also shouldn't let problems we expect to arise keep us from living appropriately in the present (Matthew 6:25-34).

Forgetting the past also keeps us from resting on the laurels of past successes. Paul had been regarded by himself and others as being at the top of the Jewish religious community and as a rising star in the legal system before he became a Christian; however, once he became a Christian, he didn't consider his past of any value in his relationship with God or his future (Acts 22:1-5; Philippians 3:4-16). This being said, we're also to live up to what we've attained. That is, if we've been blessed with success, we should understand that continued service is expected (Luke 12:47-48; Galatians 6:9-10; Revelation 2:10). For that reason, we should build upon each past triumph as an encouragement to continue serving as we have the opportunity with the expectation of future success (Romans 12:1-8). The most important success we should remember is Jesus' triumph over sin and death, so we could have life (1 Corinthians 15:20-22). Therefore, as we progress into the New Year, 2017, let's focus on Jesus and the future God has in store for those who love him (Hebrews 12:1-3; Jeremiah 11:29; 1 Corinthians 2:9-10). That will assure our eternal success.

Despite upticks, New Mexico still tough for kids

By Robert Nott
THE NEW MEXICAN

Nearly all New Mexico children have health care insurance, and sharply fewer of the state's teenagers are abusing drugs and alcohol, a new report says. Overall, however, New Mexico remains a tough place for kids.

About 3 in 10 New Mexico children live in poverty, more than 3 in 4 kids aren't learning reading and math as they should and nearly 3 in 10 don't graduate from high school on time, according to the annual New Mexico Kids Count Data Book from New Mexico Voices for Children, an Albuquerque-based advocacy group.

For the second year in a row, New Mexico ranked 49th among states for child well-being, the report says.

The report echoes previous studies by New Mexico Voices for Children and others when it comes to the state of New Mexico's children.

The annual Quality Counts report, released this month by the national Education Week magazine, found public school students in New Mexico have the poorest chance for success among students nationwide because of factors such as the state's high poverty rate, its students failing to meet learning goals in reading and math and its low graduation rate.

Still, the state has made progress in some areas when it comes to children, said James Jimenez, executive director of New Mexico Voices for Children.

Only 4 percent of children in the state do not have health insurance, for example. The number of teens abusing drugs and alcohol has dropped considerably to the point where New Mexico is now the fourth best state in the nation for those statistics. And New Mexico has moved up from near the bottom, now ranking 38th, in the number of rate of low birth-weight babies.

"This proves that if you make a concerted effort to invest in certain kinds of public policy, we can improve our ranking," Jimenez said.

"Look at children without health care. We made some tremendous strides. Why? Because we did the Medicaid expansion so that thousands of kids who did not have health insurance before now have it." He said investments in home visits for expectant mothers also have helped to build a support network for first-time parents and to help them understand what it means to deliver a healthy baby.

As it has in the past, New Mexico Voices for Children was to unveil the full report on child well-being at a news conference at the state Capitol on Tuesday as the Legislature convened for its regular annual session.

The report comes as lawmakers are trying to grapple with a budget crunch brought on in large part by the collapse of the oil and gas industry and the resulting drop in tax revenue.

Some of the report's policy suggestions will be considered by legislators. For example, the report advocates for raising the state's minimum wage from $7.50. Two bills have been introduced that would do just that -- one to $8.50 per hour and the other to $15 per hour.

Another policy recommendation -- investing more money in early childhood education programs -- also will be on the Legislature's agenda. Several Democrats are pushing for a constitutional amendment that would let voters decide whether to pull money from the state's Permanent Land Grant Fund to channel into pre-kindergarten programs.

The Legislature has previously rejected proposals to pull more money out of the permanent fund. Gov. Susana Martinez vetoed a $1 increase in the minimum wage in 2013.

"What we need is for the Legislature to prioritize children," Jimenez said. "And we need the governor to say that child well-being is important to her."

Still, he said, "We haven't made enough progress and in the aggregate, we rank 49th. That is not acceptable."

The basics of the report from New Mexico Voices for Children: 29 percent, or 141,000, of the state's children live in poverty, the second-highest rate of child poverty for any state. More than a third of children live in a household where no parent has a secure full-time job.

■ 77 percent of fourth graders are not reading at grade level.

■ 79 percent of eighth graders are not proficient in math.

■ 28 percent of students do not graduate on time. The national average is 18 percent. Gov. Susana Martinez announced Monday that the graduation rate for the class of 2016 was 71 percent, up from 68.5 for the previous class.

Since 2000, New Mexico has ranked somewhere between 43rd and 50th among states in the national Kids Count Data Book produced by the nonprofit Annie E. Casey Foundation in Baltimore.

The New Mexico Voices for Children report uses statistics for 2014-15 from the U.S. Census Bureau, the National Center for Education Statistics, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and New Mexico's Department of Education.

Jimenez said it is an evidence-based study that allows policymakers to come up with plans to address the many problems facing children in the state.

The full Kids Count report was to be posted at www.nmvoices.org.
