Time for a Rattler Reunion

□ Tucumcari classes spanning several eras to attend.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

Tucumcari High School alumni of different eras agree the annual Rattler Reunion is a time to come together, catch up and appreciate the finer things in life.

Superintendent of Tucumcari Public Schools Aaron McKinney is certainly no stranger to school events.

However, this weekend, McKinney's role will not be as an administrator but as a member of the Rattler Reunion host class of 1987. "I am looking forward to seeing many of my former classmates and friends," McKinney said.

McKinney said there was some concern about there being a 46th annual reunion following last year's retirement of alumni board member Norma Jean Crellin. Crellin stepped in 16 years ago to form a corporation and create a non-profit foundation to better run the reunion.

"If you run it as a corporation, it tends to go a lot smoother," Crellin said.

Crellin said she felt it was time for someone else to step in and run the foundation. She said she wants to remove her name from the non-profit 501(c)7.

D.A. Breen remembered as 'good man'

□ Attorney's office was dedicated to the slain prosecutor killed in '71.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

Friday's dedication of the Victor C. Breen 10th Judicial District Attorney's Office honored the memory of a dedicated prosecutor and civil servant while bringing a measure of peace and healing to the family.

"After 40 years it is healing to see the people of Tucumcari, friends and family here to honor our father," said Vicki Breen, daughter.

"The amazing thing," daughter Nancy Breen-Nunn said, "is after all these years everyone remembers our father as a honest and good man."

Victor C. Breen is the only New Mexico prosecutor killed in the line of duty. Breen, 55 at the time of his death, was shot and killed in his driveway on Dec. 1, 1971.

The shooter was identified later as Jose Rosendo Garcia, 45, who had been waiting in his car 300 feet across the street.

Breen had served as the 10th Judicial District Attorney proudly serving Quay, Harding and De Baca Counties for 20 years before his death, said Tim Rose, 10th Judicial District Attorney.

Rose said Victor was a more than just a prosecutor, but somebody who worked with the families to try to get them the help they needed. Rose said it was this type of work that introduced him to Garcia. Breen worked to help Garcia's family with Jose and his treatment for a mental disorder.

Rose said the family would tell Jose they would "call Victor" if he didn't take his medication or behave. He said Jose learned what this meant, as Victor worked with the family to get Jose the care he needed.

"It wasn't a traditional prosecution of Garcia that lead to Victor's death," Rose said. "It was Victor going out of his way to help families of Tucumcari, dealing with issues he did not have to deal with as a prosecutor."

Family, friends and current and retired area law enforcement officials were on hand for the dedication ceremony.

Among the former law enforcement were former Quay County Sheriff Francis Isler and Tucumcari Chief of Police J. Bronson Moore.

"I want to remember Victor the way I saw him, the day before he was murdered," Moore said. "We were all together after work having a drink; it wasn't frowned upon by the public like it is now."

Moore said Victor helped him to become qualified as a fingerprint analysis expert — something he never would have accomplished on his own.

"I truly appreciated what he did for me," Moore said.

A memorial was created in the lobby, designed by Interior designer Brenna Nunn-Smiley of Amarillo, Texas, who has ties to the Breen family.

"I was honored and excited when they asked me to be a part of this project," Smiley said. "I grew up in Tucumcari, I love promoting the community and this dedication is a boost to the community's morale."

Rose said the centerpiece of the memorial would be a bronze bust sculpture of

Annual Ag Field Day kicks off Tuesday

□ The event to be held at Ag Sciences Center.

By Thomas Garcia
QCS SENIOR WRITER
tgarcia@qcsunonline.com

The Agricultural Science Center in Tucumcari will hold its annual field day, which will give residents and visitors an opportunity to see applications and contributions New Mexico State University is making to the agricultural industry regionally and statewide.

"In such difficult times of funding the center must find new ways to push forward with their research and applications for its results," said Leonard Lauriault, center superintendent.

Registration for dinner and the evening program begins at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the ag science center.

The pre-dinner speaker is Chad Smith, chief executive officer of New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau.

"While we present information of value to farmers and ranchers, our field day is a family event," said Lauriault.

THE END!

I have come to that time in my life when in the near future I can see "my end."
 I ask myself, "Have I done all that my Savior has asked of me?"
 Have I truly repented of my sins? (Luke 13:3, Acts 17:30)
 Have I confessed Him to be the Son of God? (Matthew 10:32-33, Romans 10:9-10)
 Have I been baptized for the remission of my sins? (Acts 2:38, Mark 16:16)
 Am I walking in the Light as He is in the light? (Acts 2:47, I John 1:6-7)
 These are necessary to obey as we all will be judged by these commandments. Go to your Bible and read these passages yourself. Your salvation is your responsibility, not your preacher, or your friend or your parent. I must examine my life to be sure – so must everyone!
 God gave us a choice – to obey Him and receive eternal life in Heaven – or refuse to obey Him and spend eternity in Hell. These are real places – not a fairy tale!
 It's YOUR choice.

A City of Tucumcari worker shovels sand onto spilled sewage and unidentified petroleum product on South Date Street. City officials are working with state officials to determine the effects the spill will have on surrounding wells.

Officials warn of sewage spill in city

□ Residents of Powell Addition urged not to use wells until further notice.

STAFF REPORT

City officials are urging residents living in the Powell Addition in Tucumcari not to use wells until further notice for domestic or livestock watering following a spill of sewage, and unidentified petroleum product.

Following Monday's significant rainfall, the sewer lines near the intersection of Route 66 and Date Street overflowed causing a spill in the Powell Addition of the city, said City Manager Jared Langenegger.

Langenegger said along with sewage, an unknown amount of a so-far unidentified petroleum product was released. He said the spill has the potential to impact residents in the Powell Addition, which includes residents living west of U.S. Highway 54, north of Route 66, east of Date Street, and south of and adjacent to Laughlin Avenue. He said there is no indication city water services have been affected and at this point city water should be considered safe to drink.

"At this time, we do not know if the spill will have any effect on the surrounding wells," Langenegger said. "The advisement not to use the wells is in the best interest of public safety until we can know the extent of the spills damage."

Langenegger said affected residents who do not have access to city water may contact the city to make arrangements to fill water containers. He said until further notice, open flames and any activities which could cause sparks or ignition should be avoided in the impacted area.

Langenegger said the city is working closely with the New Mexico State Environment Department and the New Mexico State Police to identify the source of the petroleum product and the extent of the impact. He said officials from the State Environment Department are expected to be on scene later Tuesday.

Residents with questions or concerns may contact Jared Langenegger at 575-403-5669.

Residents, visitors, officials and area ranchers and farmers prepare for a tour of the Ag Science Center at Tucumcari during last year's annual field day. This year's field day will be held on Tuesday.

Lauriault said the NMSU ag center in Tucumcari is the only science center with the infrastructure to conduct both crop and livestock research.

He said the first speaker, Jerry Hawkes, agricultural economist will discuss developing cost and return estimates for the Tucumcari Irrigation Project. Producers are encouraged to bring any production records they are willing to share for use in developing the cost and return estimates, Lauriault added. He said anonymity will be maintained on records.

Lauriault and the staff at the NMSU ag center in Tucumcari have been working on projects with renewed energy after learning their center was not one of centers the college is considering closing.

In June NMSU's College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences Dean Rolando A. Flores discussed public concern regarding the possibility of closing two agricultural science centers.

"Despite learning the center in Tucumcari is not being considered for closure, it's no time to relax or let our guard down," Lauriault said.

During the field day Lauriault will give a presentation on relay intercropping cover crops into corn or sorghum for fall forage. Murali Darapuneni, assistant professor of semi-arid cropping systems at Tucumcari, will present information on the scope and opportunities of strip tillage.

Sal Lopez and Lee Gallegos of the New Mexico Workers Compensation administration will talk about the changes in the workers' compensation law regarding farms and ranches.

NMSU faculty and students will also give presentations on these topics:

■ Grazing research update (Brandon Meyerhoff, NMSU Animal and Range Sciences Department graduate student)

■ Blue corn selections for various beneficial traits (Randall Montgomery, NMSU Plant and Environmental Sciences Department graduate student)

■ Resisting weed resistance (Leslie Beck, extension weed specialist)

■ Tillage management systems for corn and cotton (Sifat Sultana, NMSU Plant and Environmental Sciences Department graduate student) over the operation of the Rattler Reunion and worked to ensure the event would continue.

After all these years, the best thing about the reunions is seeing all of my friends and family, said Liz Benavidez-Smith.

Smith said this year's reunion is a benchmark for her and her classmates. She said the Class of 1962 will be the Golden Rattlers. This completes the cycle of earmark years for the class, Smith added.

"We celebrated the 10th, 20th, 30th and now here we are at our 55th anniversary," Smith said.

Smith said priorities change as the years go by after graduation. She said at the 10-year mark everyone wants to come back as someone important. You want to impress your friends and show them how successful you have been, Smith added.

Smith said as the years passed the trivial matters in life began to take a back seat to the true priorities of the reunion.

"Now, all we want to know is how have they been and how are the grandchildren," Smith said.

Smith said she looks forward to seeing all of her friends, sharing new stories, laughing about old tales and remembering those who are no longer with them.

Selfless child would willingly have given organs

Last week, it was crystal clear where 6-year-old Joel Anthony Suina got his loving and giving nature. A shocking April traffic accident with an Albuquerque Police Department cruiser in the Northeast Heights injured Anthony, his sister and mother.

Anthony died after being taken off life support. Yet, even in a time of all-encompassing grief, his mother had the presence of mind to donate Anthony's organs.

He saved the lives of a 52-year-old man, a 46-year-old woman, an 11-year-old boy and a 4-month-old boy.

In addition to the life-saving gifts of his heart, liver and kidneys, Anthony's pancreas and lungs will be used in research and education.

"It's what he would have wanted," said his mother, Antoinette Suina.

"He's so loving and such a giving child that he would have wanted that."

Hundreds of New Mexicans are among the thousands of people on the national transplant waiting list, according to New Mexico Donor Services.

Registering when you renew your driver's license or going to www.registerme.org means a terrible loss can be softened just a little by giving someone — or several someones — a new chance at life.

And according to his mom, Anthony would want that.

Peddling rip-offs should be criminal

About a year ago as I was visiting California, my cell phone was stolen.

It took a tense week or so to make sure bank accounts, etc. were safe and to get a new phone.

Since then, however, my cell phone has plagued me with five or more junk calls a day.

They offer things I neither want nor need or that are too good to be true.

Usually they start with a commanding voice saying something like, "Attention!" or "Stop what you're doing now!"

Then they offer to fix your credit score today or ship you up to $5,000 in cash with no credit check, or something equally ridiculous.

Those are easy. I pay attention to an uninvited sollicita-

Steve Hansen
Local columnist

tion and hang up before they can mention it, or I stop what I'm doing now to hang up.

Then I add their phone number to my blocked contact list. There must be about 1,000 numbers on it now.

Sometimes, however, it's a live human being.

To warm themselves to you they'll say something like, "Can you hear me? Tee-hee, I'll adjust my headset..."

Then they'll make an offer you can't believe, like a week-long vacation on an exciting Pacific Island, or free car insurance, and expect you to fall for it.

I'm not even nice to these people. I either shout "Goodbye" in their ear as I hang up or choose from a menu of carefully chosen nautical terms.

I do feel bad for them. I picture them sitting in a windowless room in a basement somewhere and getting similar treatment from most of the people they call. Sometimes they live in India where they're getting a rupee or two a day trying to speak English like Americans.

They may think they're doing honest work, but to me they are aiding and abetting felons, because if the rip-offs they're promoting aren't criminal, they should be.

The business model seems to make 10 million calls, out of which 5,000 receivers might be dumb enough to send you money for which they'll never receive value. That's enough to pay all your expenses and walk away with ridiculous profits.

I would recommend rejecting any unsolicited sales call and even solicitations from charities. Ask for a phone number where you can call them. If they don't provide it, in all likelihood it's not a charity.

As for the people working the boiler room phones, I sincerely recommend they quit now and find real jobs.

McCain's wrong on Obamacare bill

Last week's Republican effort to reform Obamacare imploded when Sen. John McCain, reinventing his role of "Maverick McCain," cast the deciding vote against the so-called skinny repeal.

A cynic reviewing the short three-act play written, directed and performed by McCain could only conclude that what occurred was payback in spades for treatment he received at the hands of Donald Trump during last year's primaries.

In Act I, Maverick rises from his sick bed and rides to the rescue of Republican senators, voting in the affirmative to advance an undefined health care bill. McCain's vote brought the final count to a tie, allowing the vice president to cast a vote that allowed the process to go forward. Republicans breathed a sigh of relief as the Maverick saved them from themselves.

Rube Render

Act II found McCain generating uncertainty as he gathered input from Sen. Chuck Schumer, former Vice President Joe Biden and former Sen. Joe Lieberman, all Democrats, about their position on the skinny repeal. None of McCain's Republican colleagues had any inkling as to how he would vote.

In Act III director McCain orchestrated the scenario that allowed him to cast the deciding vote for the skinny repeal. It is reported that Maverick's vote caused "gasps" from the assembled senators. McCain couldn't have buried the knife any deeper.

Revenge, as they say, is sweet.

Since I am not a cynic, I take Sen. McCain at his word when he said, "I've stated time and time again that one of the major failures of Obamacare was that it was rammed through Congress by Democrats on a strict-party line basis without a single Republican vote."

I disagree with McCain's thought process. The major failure of Obamacare was that it was a terrible bill that was bound to collapse under its own weight as is currently happening. A bad bill passed with bipartisan unanimity is still a bad bill.

What McCain added was inconceivable. He said, "We must now return to the correct way of legislating and send the bill back to committee, hold hearings, receive input from both sides of the aisle, heed the recommendations of nation's governors, and produce a bill that finally delivers affordable health care for the American people."

Does John McCain really believe that the business as usual process he advocates will result in a health care bill during his lifetime?

McCain returns triumphantly to the center ring of the Washington circus and the position he so dearly cherishes. Once again the news media and the Democrats love him.

Above: Family, friends and local officials begin to gather in the lobby of the 10th Judicial District Attorney's office that was renamed Friday in honor of Victor C. Breen.

Breen, crafted by local artist Bill Curry, who also is a former county commissioner and a friend of Breen.

"I want to thank the family and the county officials for selecting me to be the artist to create the bust of Victor," Curry said.

Curry said he was honored to work with the Nancy, Vicki and Smiley on the creation of the bust, as they provided family photos.

"Without those pictures," Curry said, "I could not have created the piece you all have seen today."

Curry said he and his wife knew the Breens as neighbors and friends and it gave him a sense of pride to make the bust.

Members of the family and friends spoke about their memories of Victor before the ribbon cutting including his son-in-law Ray Nunn.

"Victor had a great sense of humor, as a son-in-law I got the end of it several times," Ray said.

Ray said he remembers being at the prom when Victor walked up to him and took out a pack of cigarettes from his pocket proclaiming, "Look what I found." He said

Victor even prosecuted him at one time.

"There was an old hospital where Dunn Park is now located that was boarded up and some of us figured out how to get into the building," said Jeff Nunn, family friend, recalling a childhood memory. Eventually, Jeff's older brother found out about the building and had a party.

"The problem is, the building was just down the street from Victor's house," Jeff said. "Victor was even the prosecutor in the case."

Jeff said this is a nice honor for Victor, who was a good man who would make you feel good about yourself when you spoke to him.

Rose said he wanted to thank the county commissioners, county manager and the workers who donated money, provided the building and put so much work into making this dedication possible. He said since the idea began with Matt Montoya suggesting the dedication many people have given their time, money and sweat to make this happen.

"When I announced the idea to the staff, Frankie Gutierrez went to his office and returned with money wanting to be the first to donate to the cause," Rose said.

Group seeking entries for walking team competition

The Quay County Health Council is still accepting entries for a walking team competition, Council Coordinator Alida Brown said.

Teams have until Aug. 12 to enter a five-person team for weekly walks.

Competition began July 15. Teams must walk together at least six different weeks to be eligible for the council's prize drawing.

A photo of the group walking, submitted to the council's Facebook page, is considered proof of each week. Information: 575-461-0562.

Pastors afraid to preach whole Bible

An obviously true meme appeared on Facebook that said the approval rating for the U.S. Congress is less than 20 percent.

On the other hand, in any given election, members of Congress are re-elected about 90 percent of the time.

Americans hate Congress, but love their own congressman. This is a proximity bias: All those jokers in Washington are evil, but not ours. Ours are doing a bang-up job. They're ours, after all.

Another illustration of proximity bias can be found regarding a recent Barna survey. Proportionately, out of the many pastors responding, nine out of 10 agreed that the Bible has the answers for the biggest questions facing society.

Of these nine, however, eight confessed they didn't preach those answers to their people. In addition, the reason they refused was simple fear. They feared that addressing hot topics would cause their congregation's attendance and giving to decline.

To sum up, then, 90 percent of pastors don't preach biblical answers (10 percent out of ignorance or unbelief, and 80 percent out of fear.) The other 10 percent preach the Word and let God worry about how the chips fall.

I have discussed this survey on social media and

Gordan Runyan
Religion columnist

noticed a fascinating trend. Christians despise the thought of cowardice in the pulpit. We all hate that idea. On the other hand, almost every believer is confident that his/her pastor is one of the courageous 10 percent.

My pastor's fearless. He must be. He's mine, after all.

This doesn't add up, does it? Ninety percent of pastors admit to not even trying to bring the Bible's answers to bear on society's problems. It's simply not possible that all church-going people are listening to a member of the other 10 percent. We all want to think we are, but we can't be.

People love their pastors and want to believe the best about them. That's a good thing. But, the sorry math is unavoidable: nine to one odds.

How would you know? Well, here's a list to consider: Have you ever heard a preacher apply the Scripture to these topics?

1. Capitalism versus socialism.
2. Limits on civil government, and the citizen's duty to resist in certain circumstances.
3. How inflation is a hidden tax on poor people.

4. Biblical guidelines for the education of children, and whether our schools meet those.

5. The believing business owner's rights/duties regarding gay marriage.

6. Minimum qualifications for civil leaders.

7. Immigration policy, and loving strangers and aliens.

8. Militarization of police.

9. How the modern "pro-life" movement has contributed to the continuation of abortion.

10. Is taxation theft?

I'm not suggesting pastors must preach constantly on stuff like this. But what if Christians never hear it? If we don't show people how scriptural principles touch on the real world and its problems, we wind up communicating the idea that Christianity is all about whether or not my invisible soul will go to a happy place when I die.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is about saving souls. It is also about more than that. We're supposed to pray, not only that people get saved, but also that God's will be done on Earth as it is in heaven. How can that happen when we don't know what God's will looks like?

Repairs approved for Second Street

By Steve Hansen
QCS CORRESPONDENT

The Tucumcari City Commission approved the funding of street resurfacing, sidewalk repairs and utility line relocation for two blocks of Second Street in downtown Tucumcari.

The commission approved the spending of $274,711 for the work on Second Street, including about $206,000 in grant funds from the New Mexico Department of Transportation matched by just under $68,100 in city tax funds.

The commission also voted to allow to extend the deadline for completing the 800,000-gallon Center Street water tank near downtown Tucumcari to Sept. 21, 51 days after the originally scheduled completion. Mark Martinez said the delay was caused by lapses in parts delivery.

Project costs total nearly $1.5 million in mostly New Mexico Environmental Department funds.

Mayor Ruth Ann Litchfield read the city manager's report. City Manager Jared Langenegger did not attend the commission meeting.

The report discussed the following items:

■ Completion of a wind screen around machinery at the city's swimming pool at Kvol's Park.

■ A demonstration of a paving machine that can recycle used asphalt for patching streets. The report said the city will start seeking bids to purchase such a machine for street repairs.

■ A survey of health care transportation needs that Langenegger is overseeing for the East Central New Mexico Stronger Economies Together effort, which involves Quay, Guadalupe, De Baca and Torrance counties. The survey will include questionnaires attached to city water bills, the report said.

NOTES TO REMEMBER

State regulations require the completion of the 3-shot Hepatitis B vaccine for all students entering the 7th grade. Please check your child's shot record. Students in all grades must have up to date immunizations in order to enroll. Proofs of required vaccinations are required prior to the first day of school. If your child is medically or religiously exempt from immunizations, the appropriate paperwork must be on file. Seniors who will be attending a university next year are required to have a meningococcal vaccine. It would be advisable for those seniors to obtain the vaccine before the ending of this school year or before their 19th birthday. Vaccinations may be obtained from your physician or at the Public Health Office, (461-2610).

It is important to sign and return the Student Emergency Information form as soon as you receive it. It is mandatory for all students so that parents/guardians may be reached in the event of an illness, accident or emergency involving your child. Please include any health information including allergies and chronic conditions that might affect your child while at school.

Some children will require medications while at school. The parent/guardian and physician, prior to administering any medication, must complete a Medication authorization form. Medications must be stored in the office. By law, neither the school, nor the school nurse is allowed to provide medicines to children, such as Tylenol, Aspirin or cough drops.

If a child has not been properly immunized within the appropriate time limits, the school, by law, must begin disenrollment proceedings. Questions regarding this policy can be directed to the local school office.

INSURANCE

The State of New Mexico requires that all participants in athletics be covered by insurance before participation can occur. Parents of all athletes will be required to show a proof of insurance plan. Insurance brochures will be provided to each student at the beginning of the school year. The brochure will explain the benefits and costs of the insurance plan. Claim forms will be available at the respective schools. Parents are responsible for handling all claims through the insurance company.

TUCUMCARI PUBLIC SCHOOLS SUBSTITUTE TRAINING

All individuals interested in substitute teaching with the Tucumcari Public School District are required to attend a certification workshop on Wednesday August 16, 2017 at 10:00 AM. The workshop will be held at the Multi Purpose Room at the School Administration Office. Current substitute teachers are encouraged to attend.

Coach: Time to 'shake off the summer'

Two-a-day practices start for Rattlers football.

QCS SENIOR WRITER

As a new year, new season approaches, coaches of the Tucumcari Rattlers began two-a-day practice with this year's football team prospects.

There is a strong group of starters returning this year, with several eager underclassmen ready to step up into the program, said Head Coach Wayne Ferguson.

More than 25 Rattlers were on the field at 7 a.m., running through drills.

Ferguson said they expect more to join the team for the practices throughout the week. Many players did not practice due to work schedules or family obligations, or they still needed a physical.

"It is time for you boys to shake off the summer," said Bryan Dunlap, assistant coach.

Dunlap said attention to details and commitment to performing the fundamentals is essential for growth and improvement as a player.

"If the team wants to be successful then each player has to be willing to give 100 percent from the very start," said Xavier Garcia, senior running back.

Garcia said he is excited for the season to start and looks forward to getting as many rushes on the field as possible.

"It's still early but the guys have already begun to show their enthusiasm," Ferguson said.

Families, friends gather

□ Texico residents, visitors flock to Border Town Days to mix, mingle.

A parade that crosses state lines, class reunions, barbecue from the Rotary Club, music in the park, and a feeling of unity could mean only one thing: The return of Border Town Days.

The 52nd annual event kicked off with a parade in Texico Saturday morning, crossing the border into Farwell and culminating in a craft fair and outdoor concert at Farwell's city park.

With Farwell band The Shilling Girls providing a musical backdrop, Joann Walker of Fort Worth explained what brings her to Border Town Days year after year.

"My family came here in 1942, when I was 3 years old. This is a family-oriented town. You don't see that much in America anymore. You come where the family supports you, and where the town supports you," she said.

Though Melissa Weoston may live significantly closer to Farwell (Clovis) than Fort Worth, she still sees Border Town Days as a special event.

A Texico native, she said she comes because of the event's "hometown" nature, which she described as "very welcoming."

"You always feel like you can come back home. Even if I wasn't in Clovis, I'd probably make a way to come back every year, because I take off work just so I can come to this every year," she said.

Savannah Smith, 13, and Nicholas Smith, 11, both from Amarillo, had never attended Border Town Days, but after coming with their grandmother Vicky Bermea, they also felt the sense of togetherness lauded by others.

"I'm getting to spend time with my family, and not just hanging by myself at the house. Today's a special day to hang out, have fun, kick back, have some soda, and just relax," Nicholas Smith said just before running to catch candy during the parade.

Bermea has been attending the event for approximately 20 years, and came with her five grandchildren, just as she once brought their parents.

"It brings the community closer. We get to see old friends. Everybody gets to know each other. There's less crime. Everybody's watching out for each other," she said.

Border Town Days chairman Rob Pomper was impressed to see a healthy turnout at both the parade and the concert in the park. "We've got a good crowd. It's a warm day, so it's neat to see people come out. We have four or five class reunions — which is wonderful — going back to 1967," he said. "It's neat to see so many people come back. You look at these lines, you're gonna see a whole lot of Texico-Farwell people from over the years that just want to take part in our community," he said.

Daycare workers react to hot car incident

□ Facilities review, create procedures to keep children in their care safe.

By David Grieder
STAFF WRITER
dgrieder@thenews.email

Credentials and experience are a good start, but unceasing vigilance may still be the best guarantee against certain disasters, according to some daycare providers in eastern New Mexico.

"We are continually doing a head count," said Millie Weed, owner and operator of Kid Care, a child care center licensed for the past 13 years in Clovis. "Any time that we move children, we get a count for how many are in the building."

Weed spoke to The News last week in the wake of the tragedy Tuesday afternoon in Portales, when 22-month old Maliyah Jones died and 2-year old Aubrianna Loya was critically injured after being left in a hot car for 90 minutes.

Mary Taylor, 62, and Sandi Taylor, 31, co-operators of Taylor Tots daycare, were each charged with felony child abandonment resulting in death and great bodily harm.

The Taylors said they had forgotten about the toddlers still in the car after returning from a lunch outing with other children in their care, according to police documents.

Following the incident,

Children Youth and Families Department stripped the daycare of its license, less than six months after clearing the facility on a semi-annual inspection for a license it held since 2013.

Like the now-closed Taylor Tots, Kid Care looks after no more than 12 children at a time.

For Weed and the one or two co-workers she maintains at any given time, coordination and repetition are the most proven practices for preventing deadly errors, she said.

"We go over scenarios for stuff like that at our staff meetings. We've already addressed this issue too, and we've talked to our parents as well," Weed said. "As the children come in, (staff members) acknowledge each other as to what the count is. We audibly say it to the other person...and we're pretty much doing a head count whenever we're on the play yard. Even though we know we came out with a certain amount, we're still constantly scanning."

Even for larger operations such as "Wild 'bout Kids" in Portales, the same principles apply — with one or two additional fail-safes. "Anytime (children) are outside, (staff) do head counts before they come out and when they come in. I constantly just go around classrooms and ask how many kids each classroom has," said Erika Chavez, who owns the licensed facility serving approximately 100 children with a 15-person staff for the past five years.

"Our younger kids center has kids 6 weeks (old) to age 5 and they do not leave the building whatsoever."

Chavez told The News she would like to believe that the incident last week at Taylor Tots would not have occurred at her daycare.

"I don't know if it's just because we have more staff and we are just constantly doing head counts, and ever since we started we've made it a priority to go through classrooms and make sure that all of our children are accounted for," she said.

"It's hard for me because I know those people. I've grown up in town here my whole life. Our town isn't very big...it's been hard for everybody."

CYFD spokesman Henry Varela called Tuesday's event a "heartbreaking tragedy," one all the more unfortunate for occurring in spite of the department's efforts to remind the public of precisely the same dangers posed by hot summer months.

"It's a matter of making sure that not only child care services but all people are aware in the state that there should never be a reason to leave a child or multiple children in a vehicle unattended," he said.

Anticipating the hazards of high temperatures, CYFD sent letters last month specifically warning their licensed child care providers — including the Taylors — of the dangers of combining children with hot cars, Varela said.

Additionally, CYFD had already directed its surveyors from the Early Childhood Service division to make the same reminder during their visits to licensed care providers this summer.

The danger is not only in forgetting a child in a car, but also in leaving a car unlocked for an unattended child to climb into, Varela said.

"It's really about everybody being vigilant and watching for the children, and making sure areas are secure," he said.

Varela did not indicate any serious changes to CYFD policy emerging from last week's event, but one childcare provider in Portales said she's expecting as much.

"They are going to change a lot of this policy. That's how it's going to be," said Joselyn Lampkins, who has been licensed with CYFD the past 24 years and runs the 12-child "Joselyn's Daycare" with her mother.

Lampkins said her facility typically does not transport the children at all, but if it does then only with parental permissions and parental chaperones.

She said she's stayed in operation for such a long time by carefully following procedures, documenting everything, and sharing advice with her colleagues — including the Taylors, who worked down the street from her.

"I know (the Taylors). They are very nice people and sometimes they'd asked me what to do. I share whatever I know. I share what I know because I care for the children —not just the children at my daycare," Lampkins said. "I don't judge the workers because I'm a worker myself. I pray for them."

"There's going to be a lot of things that are going to change," she added. "One makes a mistake, it's everybody's mistake."

Daycare workers waive arraignment

□ Mary and Sandi Taylor accused of leaving two children in hot vehicle.

PORTALES — The Portales daycare workers accused of leaving two children in a hot vehicle for 90 minutes on Tuesday waived their arraignments on Thursday.

Mary Taylor, 62, and Sandi Taylor, 31, co-operators of Taylor Tot daycare, remained in Roosevelt County's jail without bond.

A representative from the Roosevelt County Magistrate Court said the women have sought legal council from Attorney Tye Harmon.

Harmon could not be reached for comment.

Court documents show the Taylors face charges of child abandonment resulting in death and child abandonment resulting in great bodily harm following the incident on Tuesday, when temperatures reached into the mid-90s.

Maliyah Jones, 22 months, and Aubrianna Loya, 2, were left in car seats in a vehicle after the Taylors took 12 children to lunch in a city park, court records show.

Maliyah was pronounced dead at the Portales hospital soon after she was discovered. Aubrianna was in critical condition in a Lubbock hospital on Thursday.

The daycare has been closed since the incident.

Trump tweet stirs residents

□ Clovis, Portales locals speak out on banning transgenders from military.

By Eamon Scarbrough
STAFF WRITER
escarbrough@thenews.email

In the military, you follow orders ... whether you like them or not.

Portales veteran Mike Woolley said he feels bad for transgender people who may lose their careers if they're banned from serving in the United States armed forces, but he said the president's orders must be upheld. "When you take an oath, your oath says that you're going to obey the Constitution of the United States and you're gonna obey the orders of the president, and that president is allowed to make those decisions," Woolley said.

"If you don't want to support the Constitution and the president, then you need to find another line of employment. That's the way it works in the military." Woolley was reacting to a tweet from President Trump on Wednesday in which he said the government "will not allow transgender individuals to serve in any capacity in the U.S. Military."

"It seems to be more of an issue of people involving themselves in other peoples' lives, when it's just not necessary."

— John Laun,
Eastern New Mexico
University student

"Our military must be focused on decisive and overwhelming victory and cannot be burdened with the tremendous medical costs and disruption that transgender in the military would entail," Trump wrote.

Trump's tweet has been met with support and disgust.

"From what I read, there's something like 15,000 transsexuals serving in the military. If we want to know how it's going, it seems to me we should ask their commanders, their colleagues, and themselves, and I think we'll find out there's not a problem," said Portales' Linda Sumption.

"I think this is fear-based, and I think it's kind of a cynical political appeal on the part of the president."

Sumption said she believes the real disruption cited by Trump will come when transgender service members stationed across the world receive news of his decision.

"They're now on the line in dangerous places in the world, and they're getting this message," she said.

John Laun, an Eastern New Mexico University student, said the decision appears to be symptomatic of a larger problem.

"It seems to be more of an issue of people involving themselves in other peoples' lives, when it's just not necessary," he said.

While Laun said the military simply dictates government policy, he believes transgender individuals should be welcome within its ranks.

"I think transgenderism should be welcome in the military, as it should be welcome anywhere. We're all free, equal individuals, free to do what we want," he said.
